“GEP is laser focused on procurement services and technology, unlike most other suppliers covered in our report, with an end-to-end S2P service offering integrating consulting, software and managed services. It’s helping procurement organizations become a valued business partner that enables overall enterprise-wide strategic goals, and not just a cost-focused back-office function,” explained Saurabh Gupta, HFS Research’s chief research officer and co-author of this year’s report.

In this report, HFS expressly states GEP’s strengths as:

- Strategic sourcing and category management expertise for direct and indirect spend with over $200 billion in spend managed annually
- Proprietary AI-powered SaaS S2P technology platform, GEP SMART™
- Growth momentum with new clients driving rapid revenue growth
- Synergies between procurement and supply chain, leveraging strong, data-driven decision-making utilizing data lakes, artificial intelligence, IoT and machine learning

The HFS Research assessment provides valuable analyses and insights to help global companies choose the most suitable S2P partner to improve their global procurement operations. The report encompasses strategic sourcing, category, contract and supplier management through to procurement transactions and the providers’ latest technology solutions.
